You can use it to collect bandwidth usage data and measure the speed of your Internet or any other network connection.NetWorx can help you identify possible sources of network problems, ensure that you do not exceed the bandwidth limits specified by your ISP, or track down suspicious network activity characteristic of Trojan horses and hacker attacks.NetWorx allows you to monitor all your network connections or a specific network connection (such as Ethernet or PPP) only. The software also features a system of highly customizable visual and sound alerts.You can set it up to alert you when the network connection is down or when some suspicious activity, such as unusually heavy data flow, occurs.NetWorx can also automatically disconnect all dialup connections and shut down the system. NetWorx's incoming and outgoing traffic is represented on a line chart and logged to a file, so that you can always view statistics about your daily, weekly and monthly bandwidth usage and dialup duration.Fixed occasional freeze upon resume from stand byAdded the Greek, Catalan and Hebrew languagesFixed choosing background graph imageAutorun is now available in the portable buildsAdded adapter status monitoring to notify user should the adapter become nonoperationalFixed general usage info screen when switching from other tabsAll application files are now digitally signedChangesFixed occasional freeze upon resume from stand byAdded the Greek, Catalan and Hebrew languagesFixed choosing background graph imageAutorun is now available in the portable buildsAdded adapter status monitoring to notify user should the adapter become nonoperationalFixed general usage info screen when switching from other tabsAll application files are now digitally signedAuthor's reviewNetWorx is a utility for measuring your bandwidth usage and the speed of all kinds of wired and wireless network connections (dialup, Ethernet, ISDN, DSL, 802.11b). The program provides the ability to measure your network throughput, graphic and numeric representation of incoming and outgoing traffic, highly customizable alerts, statistics about dialup connection duration, weekly, daily, and monthly bandwidth usage. Networx is a great piece of freeware that can help you monitor and control your bandwidth usage. Here’s a full rundown and screenshot tour of the utility. Are you using your PC on a data-capped network? Unless your ISP has an easy-to-access tool for self-monitoring bandwidth usage, it’s easy to go over. Of course, this depends on how high your cap is, but you get the idea. Enter Networx, a free utility that locally tracks and tallies up your bandwidth usage for you.The interface is simple. Your usage is listed on a daily, weekly, or monthly basis. You can also see your total usage since the day you installed the tool or view detailed hourly analytics. It also works on computers with multiple users to track how much data your kids are using, for example.Aside from the main Usage window, the context menu from the system tray icon offers an impressive set of features. Being constantly on a capped data connect, my personal favorite is the Quota tool.The Quota tool needs to be set up before it can be used.In the Quota setup, you can specify whether you want daily, weekly, or monthly limits in place. You can also configure the traffic, whether off-peak hours are counted, and the total limit.Once you have your quota set up, you’ll be able to see percentage information and set up an alert based on the amount of data you’ve used.Another favorite tool is Netstat. The Netstat tool allows you to see every connection made by every application running on your computer. If you’re suspicious of a program monitoring your network traffic or maliciously connecting without your knowledge, Netstat can help make you aware of that.Overall, Networx is a nifty utility that does an effective job of monitoring bandwidth usage, and it has one other feature that I really like; it’s portable. You don’t even have to install it; throw it on a USB stick, and it will run on any PC.Download Networx from the developer’s website.
